NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—I noticed long ago that a Nazi can never put one over on the other fellow without gloating about it. Sooner or later he puts salt in the wound, if only to keep the ball rolling.

I was to be the accidental witness to this sort of thing a few days later when the Soviet Embassy staged its annual commemoration of the November 7 Revolution. I had gotten my engraved invitation for tea and reception starting at 4 p. m. It would be worth going to, and might even produce a little story for the cables, for it got around town that everybody in the political, diplomatic and military world was going to show up. No wonder, for the Soviet Embassy receptions in those days were noted for the luscious and lavish helpings of caviar, vodka and real coffee.

I got into a taxi and drove down Unter den Linden in the heart of old imperial Berlin to the drab looking square old box of a faced palace where in the old days before World War I nothing less than a high Russian prince ruled as Ambassador and where Tsar Nicholas and his wife stayed during their state visit to the Kaiser. Police and the usual sidewalk spectators lined the entrance and looked sharply at every one who came. Local temperatures Wednesday failed to climb above 12 degrees, and early in the evening slid down to the zero mark. The weatherman is promising slowly rising temperatures Thursday afternoon.

Fire Chief Wise Informs Council Of Dangers To Supply Of Water

Council Wednesday night referred to its safety committee a problem which many believe is one of the most serious the city faces under the Defense program for Circleville—that of insuring the city of a water supply in case of emergency.

The problem was called to the attention of the Council by Fire Chief Talmer Wise, who pointed out that the city receives its water supply through a 16-inch main from the pump station two miles northwest of Circleville. Should anything happen to that main the entire city would be without water, either for domestic or commercial use. The water pipe runs only a few inches under the ground, Chief Wise declared, and could be easily blown out by dynamite, or washed out by flood.

To remedy the situation Wise proposed to Council two means of

Ceiling On National Debt To Be Increased With Limit Almost Topped

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Sentiment for a federal "Victory" sales tax was developing strongly in Congress today as the legislators bent to the tremendous task of meeting President Roosevelt's request for $7,000,000,000 in new taxes to help pay the cost of crushing the axis powers.

While Mr. Roosevelt did not specifically recommend a sales tax, some prominent congressional leaders favored it due to general reluctance to further increase income and corporation taxes, which were hiked $3,500,000,000 only last fall. The higher income taxes will be felt by federal taxpayers next March 15 when they pay the first installment on their 1941 incomes.

Congressional members were jolted somewhat by the size of the President's war program — $59,000,000,000 in the fiscal year beginning next July 1, on top of $19,000,000,000 already authorized for the first six months of this year. Despite this total of $78,000,000,000 for the next 18 months, members were unanimous in their determination to provide the government with the funds it desires to beat the foes of democracy—regardless of the cost.

House Talks Sales Tax

The problem of initiating a new tax bill goes to the House under the Constitution, and it was there that sentiment for a sales tax was growing. At the same time, House appropriation leaders began the task of drafting the huge bills that will authorize the total of $59,000,000,000 in expenditures between July 1, 1942, and July 1, 1943.

TRIO OF MASTER SKI PERFORMERS NAMED AS SPIES

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 8.—The arrest of three internationally-known Austrian ski masters, one a former Olympic champion, as enemy aliens, was confirmed today by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

In custody are Frederick Friedl Pfeiffer, head ski instructor at the famed Sun Valley winter resort in Idaho and former Olympic titleholder, and two members of his staff, Hans Hauser and Joseph Seep Froelich.

Pfeiffer was arrested at Sun Valley December 8, when the United States and Nazi Germany traded declarations of war, and Hauser was taken into custody a day later. Froelich was jailed at Salt Lake City.

It was understood that Pfeiffer and Hauser have been interned, while Froelich has been detained in the Salt Lake City County jail. Several other alien employees at the Idaho resort also are in custody among 54 now being held in the Salt Lake City jail awaiting hearings, according to M. F. Lence, U. S. Immigration Bureau agent.

Two of the Austrian ski experts are married to American heiresses. Pfeiffer two years ago married Miss Hoyt Smith of Salt Lake City, socially prominent daughter of Fred Smith, president of the First Security Trust Co. Froelich is the husband of the former Natalie Rogers, daughter of the late H. H. Rogers of the Standard Oil Co.

British imperial troops in Central Malaya seemed to have slowed the Japanese drive on Singapore today, but a new British withdrawal from the western end of the Perak River line was admitted as the Japs, careless of casualties, advanced virtually over the bodies of their own dead.

Japanese casualties have been tremendous, it was emphasized.

Meanwhile, no change was reported from the Philippines where the gallant, thin line commanded by General Douglas MacArthur continued to hold firm despite tremendous pressure.

Things continued to go badly for the axis in Russia, Libya and China, and R.A.F. planes, based in Rangoon, staged a heavy and effective raid on Bangkok, capital of Thailand. Considerable damage was said to have been done to military objectives and huge fires were kindled by the raiders, all of whom returned safely.

In London, Major Richard Clement Attlee, lord privy seal, told the House of Commons that American entry into the war had sealed the doom of Adolf Hitler and his axis stooges. He defended British military leadership in Malaya, but admitted that 15 military airports already had been lost.

Attlee revealed that the command of Sir Archibald P. Wavell, recently named supreme commander-in-chief of the united nations in the southwestern Pacific, did not include India or Australia.

This revelation was a surprise since Wavell has served as commander-in-chief for India since he was shifted from the Middle East command.

Pressure in Crimea

The so-called invincible troops of Adolf Hitler were under pressure from a new quarter today—the southern Crimea—as the revitalized soldiers of Josef Stalin tore out of besieged Sevastopol to smash at the German flank. The Soviets also continued to advance on the Moscow Front, and in the north.

Finland's Japanese today admitted a "strategic withdrawal" from Changsha. The withdrawal, according to Chungking authorities, was extremely strategic in that two Japanese divisions were cut to bits in carrying it out.

Rome reported, but London did not confirm, that a British battleship of the Valiant class had been damaged severely in the harbor of Alexandria.

FOUR CHILDREN MOTHERLESS AS FIRE HITS HOME

SIDNEY, Jan. 8.—Four small children were left motherless today by a fire which destroyed the frame residence of Edward Purke and claimed the life of his wife, Mrs. Ruth Purke, 32.

The family was living in a remodeled garage at Montra, Shelby County, until they could make other arrangements. When an over-heated stove ignited the building, the Purkes and their four children, 2 to 14 years old, escaped but Mrs. Purke re-entered the flaming building to get clothing for the children.

She was overcome and a spring lock prevented the husband from reaching her. Her body was found in the ruins of the building which burned to the ground. Purke is employed at a refrigerator plant in Sidney.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Charles A. Lindbergh arrived in Washington today from Boston presumably to discuss with War Department officials his proposed return to duty in the Army Air Corps in which he once was a colonel.

The man whose solo flight to Paris 15 years ago won him the title "Lone Eagle," stepped from his train alone this morning, wearing dark glasses and with his coat collar turned high in the biting cold which gripped Washington.

Discovered by reporters as he left the station, Lindbergh was courteous but uncommunicative.

"Have you come to Washington to confer about a return to duty?" he was asked.

"I am sorry, but I can't discuss why I am here," Lindbergh replied. "I'd like to, but I can't."

Photographers asked for pictures and Lindbergh smilingly removed his dark glasses and posed for them.

Then he grabbed a cab, asserting that he had not decided where he would stop while in the capital.

War Department officials, from Secretary Stimson down, have indicated that there is a distinct possibility that Lindbergh will be given some role in the defensive effort.

The famed flier resigned his colonelcy last year because of the increasing criticism of his activities against American involvement in war.

TIRE RATIONING BOARDS RECEIVE QUESTION FORMS

Pickaway County's tire rationing Advisory Council Thursday mailed questionnaires to chairmen of the local tire rationing boards to determine the number of persons in the respective districts who would be eligible for new tires.

Judge Terwilliger, county tire rationing coordinator, pointed out that the local tire rationing boards had the final say on who should receive tires. Regulations provide that any person not satisfied by the action taken by the local board may appeal to the State Tire Rationing Coordinator within 30 days after the decision is given.

No appeals are made to the county Advisory Council, the judge pointed out. Duty of the Advisory Council is to allocate the tires to the respective tire rationing boards.

At a meeting Thursday, permanent officers in the Advisory Council were chosen. Judge Terwilliger was made coordinator, A. L. Wilder was selected vice-coordinator, and John Messick secretary. Other member of the council is E. C. Ebert.

measures were:

1. Legislation to broaden the Social Security law so as to bring into it millions of people not now covered and raised an additional $2,000,000,000 in federal revenue in this field. This would be over and above the general $7,000,000,000 new tax bill.

2. A bill to raise the ceiling on the national debt, which already is getting perilously close to the legal $65,000,000,000 limit. In his budget message, the President estimated the national debt will be $70,000,000,000 by June 30, the end of this fiscal year, and $110,000,000,000 by the end of the next fiscal year.

On the spending side of the picture, Chairman Cannon (D) Mo., of the House Appropriations Committee, announced that his group will be grinding out the huge supply bills by the middle of the month, providing funds for normal governmental functions as well as the $1,000,000,000 a week which the President wishes to spend on the war.

"The President has told us what he wishes to produce and it's up to us to provide him the means to do it just as promptly as possible," Cannon declared.

On the taxing side, members of the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee felt that they had the harder job—to increase federal revenues from $18,000,000,000 a year to $27,000,000,000 a year, thus taking one-quarter of the national income to finance half the war effort, leaving the other half for borrowing.

In addition to a possible sales tax, individual and corporate income levies are regarded as certain to be increased sharply. In the lower and middle brackets, these new imposts undoubtedly will have to be collected at the source—deducted from payrolls—members agreed.

"I am in favor of raising all the additional taxes that can be raised without impeding production," said Senator George (D) Ga., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. "Whether that figure will be $7,000,000,000 or $17,000,000,000 remains to be seen."

Rep. Jenkins (R) Ohio, a minority ways and means member, said that "if we have to have $7,000,000,000 we can get it," but declared that the sales tax plan probably will be the only way it can be done.

The vacancy is expected to be filled at the next regular Council meeting, January 21.

A petition asking for the installation of a sanitary sewer on Hayward Street was presented to Council and voted into the service committee.

State To Aid On Streets

Council adopted a resolution asking the state highway department to assist the city in clearing ice and snow from Routes 22 and 23, Main and Court Streets, through the city.

The resolution was adopted after the highway department had volunteered to assist in removing the ice and snow from Main and Court, since both are federal routes requested by the War Department to be kept clear at all times.

Firemen submitted a petition to Council calling attention to the wages paid members of the fire department in comparison with other departments of the city. Firemen work 72 hours a month for $100 a month. The matter was referred to the appropriations committee, which has agreed to take up the matter when it considers its budget.

A special session to consider the budget may be called, President Goeller maintaining that additional figures were necessary before the 1942 financial problem could be discussed intelligently.

O. S. Bookwalter of Kingston is in Mount Carmel Hospital, Columbus, for a major operation.

"The Book of the Living God" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. Maurice Culver, pastor of the Commercial Point Methodist Church, when he comes to First Presbyterian Church Thursday evening for the fourth in the series of Week of Prayer services. The service will start at 7:30.

Funeral services were conducted Thursday afternoon in Derby for Edward Smith, 68, who died Tuesday. A son Charles and two grandchildren survive.

The state liquor department has suspended club permits of Elks, Eagles and Moose Lodges in Chillicothe where it found slot machines operating.

Edward Lemley, Hayward Street, was taken to Berger Hospital Wednesday for medical treatment after he suffered a stroke at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Boyer of Circleville Route 2 are parents of a son born early Thursday in Berger Hospital.

A son was born in Berger Hospital Thursday to Mr. and Mrs. Grover Temple, 307 South Court Street.

lumbus airport, an all-time low for the date.

Meanwhile, the state highway department reported roads in the vicinity of Cleveland, Ashtabula, Warren, Akron, Youngstown, Canton, Marion, Delaware, Newark, Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Chillicothe, Portsmouth, Athens and Marietta slippery in spots.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—The coldest winter weather in two years gripped the Chicago area, northern and southern Illinois in increasingly frigid embrace today and the best the weatherman could do about it was to mumble something concerning "warmer" temperatures of eight to 12 above sometime this afternoon.

Early today the mercury slid to a bone-chilling 10 under zero in Chicago, thus coming within two degrees of the city's official low of -12 for Wednesday without half trying.

The weather bureau had predicted a temperature of 12 to 14 below for this morning, with corresponding readings throughout the state, but as the day progressed the mercury showed no signs of dropping further, and even moved up a little.

When will the cold wave stop? It's a military secret, according to H. A. Downs, of the Chicago Weather Bureau, "because of military restrictions, we can't disclose when the cold wave will be broken," he said.

The most widespread distress caused by the cold wave in Chicago's environs struck suburban Winnetka where 2,800 customers of the North Shore Gas Company were without fuel. Mechanical breakdowns in the main Waukegan production plant and heavy consumption combined to cause breakdown of service in Winnetka, a company official explained.

Approximately 300 Winnetka families dependent on gas for household heating resorted to electric heaters, oil stoves, wood fires or other means for warmth, or moved to the homes of neighbors.

LIMBACH TO ENTER ARMY

NEW PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8.—Attorney Arthur L. Limbach, former Democratic state executive committee chairman, was enroute to Washington today to offer his services to the army. Limbach, a captain, was released from the army several months ago under the 45-year-old compulsory retirement regulation then in effect.

GOERING PLAYED BY RIBBENTROP

mosphere got quicker attention from the uniformed German police and the non-uniformed Russian GPU than all the uniforms and diplomatic tophats. You had to keep that engraved invitation prominently in sight to get by.

Embassy Showed Little Change

Inside, the Russian Embassy had changed none at all from Tsarist days, except that an oil painting of Stalin hung in the main hall and series of rooms through which you pass in order to get into the reception chamber. The heavy gold frame holding that painting was the same which held the life-sized painting of Tsar Nicholas II, and the Imperial Crown with its Russian double-headed eagle still caught the eye above the head of Stalin. The heavy red carpets, the old fashioned glass chandeliers and the imperial table and silverware were as good as ever. A lone marble bust of Lenin against a wall of the main reception room was all there was to remind you that Soviet Russia ruled here, and not the court of St. Petersburg.

I went perfunctorily through the usual reception line, announced and presented according to etiquette by one of the bright young men from the German Foreign Office. The Russian Ambassador of that time was a nonentity named Skwarzev, shaking in his boots every time the GPU looked at him and showing fear in his eyes if any foreigner came up to do some talking.

Beside him stood a woman dressed in plain black from head to foot, not necessarily ugly, but very much a part of that embassy. She played the role of wife in public and of GPU chief behind the scene.

In addition there was the bright and ascetic little Pavlov, said to be one of Stalin's illegitimate sons and by others of different relationship. Whatever the case, this blond young man talked perfect English and always came up to ask numerous questions while urging you to help yourself to the good things on the table.

Reported Direct To Stalin

He was the lad who did the real reporting to Stalin out of Berlin on the goings-on. So it wasn't surprising to see him recalled to Moscow to take charge of the Central European Political Department back there as soon as Big-Shot Dekanozov from the Soviet inner ring replaced the other man as Ambassador. That was early in 1941, proving that Stalin was smelling the wind and wanted somebody on the spot in Berlin who could tell him what was really being cooked up by Hitler.

Goering came clanking in the blue uniform of the air force, a stripe of white two inches wide on the seams of his trousers. He had on the usual carload of medals but made short shrift of formalities. He ploved his way forward through the crowd straight to the table where I was helping myself to some caviar and vodka, firmly elbowing aside the excited and highly toiletied ladies who came with a rush for Hermann.

But it was his off day for some reason or other and he was fixated interested in that bulbous brown caviar from the Caspian. He grabbed a plate and sank a spoon into the caviar pot. He might as well have been swinging a spade and the portion that came out on that plate would have cost a German a month's wages.

Every ambassador, every military attache, and all the important Nazi world stood around that room and had their eyes fixed on him but he was eating caviar and too busy to notice them. Out of the corner of my eye I saw Ribbentrop coming in from the other room, apparently making a bee-line for Goering.

Far be it for me to eavesdrop, but business is business, and if those two were going to shoot their mouths off within hearing of strange ears, then conscience would never bother me. They knew the rule better than I that in Nazi land you look around and especially over your shoulder before you do any talking. I wasn't invisible, although naturally I looked the opposite way so as not to draw their attention to me. Ribbentrop of the fast-greying hair and the slight forward slant in his breadbasket stood quietly alongside Goering for a moment, as if waiting to see how much caviar a man could eat without stopping for breath. He lit a cigar and nudged the new Reichsmarschal. Goering glanced around and his eyes started dancing a little more nervously. He uttered a perfunctory greeting and went on with his meal.

"We haven't met since we clarified our personal relationships and defined our mutual duties and authority," the affected voice of Ribbentrop said in an undertone. "You know Goering, I have always said that we will get along fine if you mind your own business and let me be the Foreign Minister."

Ribbentrop was gone and left the Embassy before Goering could catch his breath.

Goering held his temper in check that day but it can be taken for granted that he made a mental note to get even. Experience in big-time politics has shown him that everybody has his ups and downs. He knows that Ribbentrop probably for the duration of the war, is sitting pretty and can hardly be dislodged from his seat alongside the mighty. But some day things might change, and then would come the day of reckoning. That's the way it goes in Naziland.

(Editor's Note: Huss concludes the story of Goering and his squabbles tomorrow.)

EIGHT MEN LOST AS MINE LAYER SINKS AT SEA

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Jan. 8.—Eight men were missing and believed lost today as a result of the sudden sinking of the United States Army mine-layer Arnold.

Captain W. H. Chastain, of Waterford, Conn., was picked from the sea which was running high in sub-zero weather and on which floated life belts and overturned lifeboats.

Several members of his crew also were reported rescued.

The Arnold was on an errand of mercy—to aid a disabled mine-layer—when she suddenly sprang a leak and sank at 1 o'clock this morning.

Names of the crew were not known inasmuch as the men had been assembled for the quick dash to the stricken craft.

The Arnold, according to authorities, had taken the other vessel in tow but radioed she was having difficulty in the high seas.

Thereupon another mine-layer went out. The latter craft had both the Arnold and disabled craft in tow when suddenly the Arnold sprang a leak and sank.

The crew of the third vessel hardly had time to cut the hawsers connecting with the Arnold before the latter craft sank.

GUNNY SACK SUPPLY MAY SOON BE USED BY ARMY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The gunny sack, that familiar container of fruits and vegetables, may soon become a rarity in American life due to the war, the Agriculture Department revealed today.

Burlap supplies, most of which come from India, may be seriously reduced, the department said, and with two-thirds of the supply necessary for the Army, farmers and packers may have to look for kinds of wrapping.

The wrapping and package situation for farm products in general is in a bad way, officials said, since there is also a shortage of heavy paper for bags, and cotton sacking is being taken more and more for tents, uniforms, and sandbags, leaving less for agricultural uses.

DEFENSE PROGRAM BLAMED

DAYTON, O.—The national defense program is getting blamed for everything, including Dayton's dirty streets. Because of priorities, three of the city's five automotive street cleaners are idle, as it is impossible to get the material from which the brushes are made.

JAPS DRIVE ON IN MALAY AREA

mand announced from Cairo that axis forces trapped in the Jeda-baya area of Libya had begun to scramble toward Tripolitania under cover of a severe sandstorm. The British added that they were continuing to apply pressure against trapped axis forces around Halfaya Pass.

War Department spokesmen in Washington proclaimed that the intrepid defense of the Philippine Islands by Gen. MacArthur's forces has postponed and possibly prevented Nipponese successes at Singapore and elsewhere in the Far East.

The gallant fight put up by the American and Filipino troops have given the United States, Britain, China and the Netherlands time to strengthen their military position at other points, experts said.

Latest advices said the Japs were lunging against Gen. MacArthur's forces and increasing their pressure at "all points." But the War Department in Washington said the Philippine defenders were "continuing steady and valiant resistance."

Defenseless Towns Hit

The Jap attacks were continued after Nipponese planes bombed seven "defenseless towns" on Luzon Island. The War Department said four were "completely razed" by bombs—although none contained any military installations.

Attacking on Sundays, Christmas Day and New Year's Day, the Washington communique stated, low-flying Jap planes bombed the towns and machine-gunned civilians, taking a heavy toll of life.

But with ever-increasing force, America was swinging into action to pay back her enemies for these outrages. Legislators in Washington took up the task of meeting President Roosevelt's demand for $7,000,000,000 in new taxes to help pay the cost of crushing the axis. Sentiment for a federal "victory" sales tax developed strongly in Congress.

At the same time a congressional drive for creation of a supreme war production office—counterpart of Britain's ministry of supply—gained momentum. The Senate Military Affairs committee ordered hearings on the proposal.

Sevastopol Guarded

Cheerful news for the democracies continued to come from Russia, where Soviet forces launched a new drive in the Crimea aimed at forcing the Nazis from the peninsula and dissipating the German threat to the Sevastopol naval base.

Defenders of Sevastopol charged out of their positions and drove the Nazis back three to five miles, latest advices said, while planes of the Black Sea fleet aided them by inflicting "heavy blows" on the retreating German units.

From China likewise came reports of new defeats for the Japanese. Another 5,000 Japs were declared to have been killed and wounded in bitter fighting north of Changsha where thousands of Nipponese troops are trapped.

Thousands more of the Japanese appeared fated to die when the Chinese encirclement maneuver is air-tight and the defenders of Changsha close in for the kill.

At Singapore, British authorities announced that the Japs are using troops of the veteran Fifth Division in Malaya—war-seasoned fighters who have been in action almost without interruption since July, 1937. But these forces have paid heavily for their advances is ready to go into action when the time is ripe to destroy the enemy's striking power "which is more essential in a war of movement than loss of territory," the Australian radio said today, according to CBS.

NEW YORK—The nation's war production schedule, outlined by President Roosevelt, calls for building a plane every four minutes and a tank every seven minutes of the year 1943, the National Association of Manufacturers pointed out today.

MOSCOW — The Communist newspaper Pravda said today that German forces during the month of December "lost everything east of Leningrad they had captured during September, October and November."

BUENOS AIRES — Delegates from five countries including Argentina today prepared to depart for the Rio De Janeiro conference of Latin American foreign ministers, with the motto, according to official quarters, "cooperate with the United States, but don't precipitate events."

NEW YORK — The National Broadcasting Company reported today that "the latest attempt of the axis to try to find out the whereabouts of the American naval forces comes from Radio Rome. 'An Italian broadcast,' said NBC, 'says that an American battleship was sunk in an engagement with Japanese naval units 600 miles off the Philippine island of Mindanao. And the Italian radio attributed its news to 'dispatches from San Francisco.'"

NEW YORK — The Vichy, France, radio reported in a broadcast picked up by CBS today that the Paris state tribunal "has pronounced sentence in the affair of the forgery of 50,000 sheets of food tickets." The broadcast said that seven persons were condemned to forced labor for life and their property confiscated, while five more were fined and imprisoned.

BARBERS MAY COLLECT OLD BLADES FOR U. S.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8 — Answer came today to the vexing question of what to do with old razor blades.

It was: "Tanks for Yanks—Save Your Old Razor Blades." Solution to the problem was furnished by the Master Barbers Association of Chicago whose executive secretary-treasurer, Frank Allotta, announced that every barber shop would be a receiving station. He added that steps were being taken to make the campaign nationwide.

More than 7,000,000 blades, he said, are sold every year and more than 5,000 tons of metal go into their manufacture annually.

down the western Malayan coast, the British said.

Front-line dispatches described the new British counter-attacks in the area above Kuala Selangor as "100 percent effective." They said the British drive had smashed Jap attacks to turn the left flank of the line defending Kuala Lumpur, strategic rail center and gateway to Singapore.

fire cisterns still available. Originally there were about 15 cisterns, each holding between 1,000 and 1,400 gallons of water, located at various points throughout the city. Some of the cisterns have been filled up, and others have been covered over with pavement, but the fire chief told councilmen he believed seven or eight of them could be placed in use with a little repair. The cisterns are brick lined. Most of them leak and would have to be relined with cement.

Among the cistern locations, the fire chief listed the following: Franklin Street in front of the Fire Department; Court and Main Streets, Court and Pleasant, Ohio and Court, Scioto and Harrison, East Mound Street, Main and Pickaway and East Franklin Street.

C. C. Of A. Willing To Aid

Chief Wise told Council he had conferred with N. L. Cochran, superintendent of Container Corporation, who had agreed to allow the city to tap into his company's well in case of an emergency. Container Corporation has its own chlorinator, which would mean water from the well could be used for drinking purposes.

FAVORABLE END OF WARFARE IN 1944 PREDICTED

"We are in a war of blood, sweat and tears which will make the last one look like a Sunday School picnic," was the declaration of Dr. W. J. Smith, history professor at Ohio University, when he spoke at the Rotary luncheon in the Pickaway Arms Thursday noon.

He presented a dark picture for Americans in the near future, but predicted the end of the war in 1944 with an allied victory.

Dr. Smith, recently returned from the Orient where he spent 18 years, described the war in the Pacific as secondary to the war in Europe. "However, we have greatly underestimated the strength of Japan," he said.

"Japan is capable of waging a 'blitz' war for another year, and she has food to last her for the next three years," he declared. He bitterly criticized the "wishful thinking" persons of the United States and described our appeasement policy with Japan as "damnable." In 1940, we sold Japan four million tons of petroleum products and sent her ten times the amount of goods that we purchased from her. Now she is using those same products against our boys in the Philippines, he said.

The speaker predicted that the United States would lose all but perhaps a foothold in the Philippines, since the extended coast line of the islands made invasion a comparatively simple matter.

He predicted that within the next couple of years we will send not one but several American Expeditionary Forces abroad, the largest of which will go through the Flanders gateway into Berlin. "And this time we will go into Berlin," he said. Another AEF may be sent into the Persia and Turkey region to check a Nazi thrust in that direction.

In China, Dr. Smith sees a strong ally for the United States. The Chinese army now is larger than it was when the war started. Morale in the country is high, and form of a possible army coup against Hitler.

Writing he had come into possession of secret details concerning Gestapo activities following the dismissal of Field Marshal Walther Von Brauchitsch, the correspondent said the machine gun nests are being manned by picked units of Hitler's own SS corps (the Schutzstaffel, his personal bodyguard.)

The machine gun nests are armed with anti-tank guns and anti-aircraft as well as smaller-caliber weapons, the correspondent reported.

"With the real magnitude of the German reverses and casualties in Russia filtering into the Reich and America's entry increasing German anxieties, Hitler is evidently expecting trouble," he added.

"In Berlin double-towered bunkers, 60 by 20 yards, are being erected near the zoo, also in the workmen's district of north Berlin and industrial east Berlin. These are equipped with anti-aircraft, anti-tank and machine guns.

"Machine gun nests have been installed on the roofs of scores of buildings. Many buildings have been evacuated altogether and occupied by SS."

125 AT UNIOTO RALLY CALLED BY FARM GROUP

Robert L. Immell Pledges Committee To Work For Good Of Country

CIRCLEVILLE MEN TALK

Howard Orr, James I. Smith, Elred Cayce Discuss Industrial Angle

One hundred and twenty-five Pickaway and Ross County farmers and industrialists gathered in the Unioto School, Ross County, Wednesday evening to hear a pledge by Robert L. Immell, a member of the Patriotic Agricultural and Industrial Committee of the two counties, that facts concerning production of the land now under consideration for an Army cantonment will be presented to War and Agricultural Departments—undiluted by sentiment.

The committee last week end drew up a letter in which are included numerous details and facts concerning production of agricultural products in the two counties. To have the government take this land for military purposes would be a major blow to the farming interests of the district, the committee holds.

"It is our opinion that this area can best serve National Defense by continuing as agricultural land," Immell told the audience. "We assure you that we will do everything in our power to prove this to the War and Agricultural departments. If, however, the War Department sees otherwise and deems this area as indispensable, then we will do our part to help, because we are in a war—a war we must win."

To the group, among whom was a large number of landowners, several Circleville industrialists and many others whose interests revolve about farming—statistics on food production by the two counties were read.

One of the speakers was Howard Orr, president of the Winor Canning Co. who painted "the impressive picture of the bread basket which lies out here and which can best serve the county by remaining in its present state."

Mr. Orr asserted that to take this area out of its present status would be to affect the entire agricultural economy of the two counties which he said are principally agricultural ones.

Not Landowner

Terming himself a "white collar farmer" James I. Smith Jr., another Circleville canning factory official, said that he was interested in preservation of the land for agricultural purposes, even though he owned no property in the considered area. He pointed out that the government had requested increased canning for the coming season and that seven factories in Pickaway County alone draw on this area for their products.

"Food will win the war and write the peace" was the statement reiterated by Eldred Cayce, Ralston-Purina Co. plant manager, who stated his belief that there is much less-productive land that can be used for a cantonment site.

"Now is the time for cool, solid thinking," Fred Orr, Ross County AAA chairman, told the audience, pointing out situations and problems that may arise in case the area is selected.

Mr. Immell, who was chairman of the meeting, charged in his opening remarks that "this community has been made the victim of a propaganda campaign that might take from the two counties their most productive land."

Terming Ross and Pickaway Counties as the most fertile in Ohio, he said that although information as to War Department plans is not available, the area has not yet been chosen as a site; that "agents of the government now are merely looking over the region."

In closing the session, he asserted that "certain suitable regions are chosen for cantonments because they are peddled." He charged that Camp Sherman site was chosen in a similar fashion;

Red Cross Fund Moves Past $1,200 Locally

H. W. Campbell of Williamsport, chairman of the Red Cross Drive of that community, reported Wednesday that $1,050 had been collected at this time and that he expected to have $1,100 for the drive by Saturday when more of the reports would be in. Williamsport had made $700 its goal in the drive.

Workers stationed at Red Cross headquarters, West Main Street, reported Thursday that more than $1,200 already had come in and that solicitors in the various districts were bringing in good reports to boost that amount rapidly.

At the end of the day, Wednesday, $1,207.85 had been brought in by workers from some of the twenty-five districts of the city and county. The drive for $8,500, Pickaway County's share of a $50,000,000 War Relief Fund, will close next Monday, with a Victory Banquet to be held Monday noon in the Elks Home. Tickets for the banquet may be secured at Red Cross headquarters until noon Friday, Carl Leist, county Red Cross chairman, said.

With the campaign approaching the $11,000,000 mark, national headquarters has reported 297 local chapters have exceeded their quotas and that two of these already have more than doubled their goals.

Contributions received to date in the drive to raise a minimum of $50,000,000 total $10,780,341. The Park County Chapter, and the Blackfeet Reservation Chapter, both in Montana, announced they had doubled their quotas.

Among chapters reporting was the Hawaii chapter, with total contributions of $56,000. The Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America gave $5,000, asking that it be credited to the Chicago chapter.

Danville, Virginia, reported that the Little Theatre Group there, turned over its bank account of $186.50 to the campaign, while word came from Palm Beach, Florida, that all taxi drivers in that city are donating their tips to the Red Cross. Factory employees of Skillman Hardware Mfg. Co., Trenton, N. J., will work Saturday morning, January 10, and turn their time-and-a-half wages over to the drive.

Ernest F. Martin and wife are leaving here by auto this morning for points in Florida. They expect to be gone for a few weeks.

SCHOOL NOTES

With the end of the first semester of school less than two weeks off, teachers are doing their best at Ashville to complete requirements in the various subjects and get their students in the proper mental condition for the mid-term examinations. All students take the tests which count one-fourth in the semester grade.

Only one new course, so far as is known at present, will be offered next semester. "Introduction To Business" is the title of the textbook which will be studied, taking place of Commercial Law which is a one-half credit course.

Glenn Malone, now absent from school to enlist in the Navy, if he is accepted, will be the first high school student to enter military service.

The intense cold caused buses to be somewhat late Tuesday morning, thus providing some irregularity in first period classes. All rural pupils were in their classes by 9:30, however.

It appears that several students have decided to discontinue their schooling with the close of the holiday vacation period. More details on this will be forthcoming a little later.

Basketball fans are anxiously awaiting the next game of the home club which plays Washington here this Friday night. The last game played was at Carroll where the boys lost a close one, 31 to 30, so they are themselves anxious to renew hostilities and get back in the win column. The Bronkos have now lost two games, both of them being from outside the county. The other loss came at the hands of Lancaster St. Mary's and this one, you will recall, was by a two point margin, 28 to 26. The locals lead the county league in both the varsity and reserve standings.

Saturday night the team travels to Somerset for another "inter-sectional" contest. Then, the next big game to point for is the away-from-home battle with the county seat aggregation, namely the Circleville Tigers. The boys are modestly confident that the fellows from roundtown can be beaten and no doubt the game will draw a big crowd from Ashville. This game will be played on Tuesday night, the 20th.

Another good attraction this month will be the Darby game at Derby. AHS is expected to take this one but may have a hard fight to do it. The date for this tilt is the 30th.

Jackson on the 16th and Perry on the 23d seem like very easy games and must be considered as "in the bag".

125 AT UNIOTO RALLY CALLED BY FARM GROUP

Robert L. Immell, Pledges Committee To Work For Good Of Country

CIRCLEVILLE MEN TALK

Howard Orr, James I. Smith, Elred Cayce Discuss Industrial Angle

One hundred and twenty-five Pickaway and Ross County farmers and industrialists gathered in the Unioto School, Ross County, Wednesday evening to hear a pledge by Robert L. Immell, a member of the Patriotic Agricultural and Industrial Committee of the two counties, that facts concerning production of the land now under consideration for an Army cantonment will be presented to War and Agricultural Departments—unadulterated by sentiment.

The committee last week end drew up a letter in which are included numerous details and facts concerning production of agricultural products in the two counties. To have the government take this land for military purposes would be a major blow to the farming interests of the district, the committee holds.

"It is our opinion that this area can best serve National Defense by continuing as agricultural land," Immell told the audience. "We assure you that we will do everything in our power to prove this to the War and Agricultural departments. If, however, the War Department sees otherwise and deems this area as indispensable, then we will do our part to help, because we are in a war—a war we must win."

To the group, among whom was a large number of landowners, several Circleville industrialists and many others whose interests revolve about farming—statistics on food production by the two counties were read.

One of the speakers was Howard Orr, president of the Winorr Canning Co. who painted "the impressive picture of the bread basket which lies out here and which can best serve the county by remaining in its present state."

Mr. Orr asserted that to take this area out of its present status would be to affect the entire agricultural economy of the two counties which he said are principally agricultural ones.

Not Landowner

Terming himself a "white collar farmer" James I. Smith Jr., another Circleville canning factory official, said that he was interested in preservation of the land for agricultural purposes, even though he owned no property in the considered area. He pointed out that the government had requested increased canning for the coming season and that seven factories in Pickaway County alone draw on this area for their products.

"Food will win the war and write the peace" was the statement reiterated by Eldred Cayce, Ralston-Purina Co. plant manager, who stated his belief that there is much less-productive land that can be used for a cantonment site.

"Now is the time for cool, solid thinking," Fred Orr, Ross County AAA chairman, told the audience, pointing out situations and problems that may arise in case the area is selected.

Mr. Immell, who was chairman of the meeting, charged in his opening remarks that "this community has been made the victim of a propaganda campaign that might take from the two counties their most productive land."

Terming Ross and Pickaway Counties as the most fertile in Ohio, he said that although information is not available, the area has not yet been chosen as a site; that "agents of the government now are merely looking over the region."

In closing the session, he asserted that "certain suitable regions are chosen for cantonments because they are peddled." He charged that Camp Sherman site was chosen in a similar fashion;

Red Cross Fund Moves Past $1,200 Locally

H. W. Campbell of Williamsport, chairman of the Red Cross Drive of that community, reported Wednesday that $1,050 had been collected at this time and that he expected to have $1,100 for the drive by Saturday when more of the reports would be in. Williamsport had made $700 its goal in the drive.

Workers stationed at Red Cross headquarters, West Main Street, reported Thursday that more than $1,200 already had come in and that solicitors in the various districts were bringing in good reports to boost that amount rapidly.

At the end of the day, Wednesday, $1,207.85 had been brought in by workers from some of the twenty-five districts of the city and county.

The drive for $8,500, Pickaway County's share of a $50,000,000 War Relief Fund, will close next Monday, with a Victory Banquet to be held Monday noon in the Elks Home. Tickets for the banquet may be secured at Red Cross headquarters until noon Friday, Carl Leist, county Red Cross chairman, said.

With the campaign approaching the $11,000,000 mark, national headquarters has reported 297 local chapters have exceeded their quotas and that two of these already have more than doubled their goals.

Contributions received to date in the drive to raise a minimum of $50,000,000 total $10,780,341. The Park County Chapter, and the Blackfeet Reservation Chapter, both in Montana, announced they had doubled their quotas.

Among chapters reporting was the Hawaii chapter, with total contributions of $56,000. The Polish National Alliance of the United States of North America gave $5,000, asking that it be credited to the Chicago chapter.

Danville, Virginia, reported that the Little Theatre Group there, turned over its bank account of $186.50 to the campaign, while word came from Palm Beach, Florida, that all taxi drivers in that city are donating their tips to the Red Cross. Factory employees of Skillman Hardware Mfg. Co., Trenton, N. J., will work Saturday morning, January 10, and turn their time-and-a-half wages over to the drive.

BRICKER SENDS MAYORS HOME WITHOUT CASH

Governor Tells Officials To Start Slashing All Expenses To Bone

OHIO MUST KEEP MONEY

Special Session Will Be Called Only As Means Of Aiding U. S.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—"A special legislative session will be called for one purpose and one purpose only and that is to promote the victorious conduct of the war" was the message carried to home folk today by representatives of Ohio's debt ridden cities following a conference with Gov. John W. Bricker.

The group, led by Mayors Floyd Green of Columbus and Frank J. Lausche of Cleveland, met with the governor yesterday pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Local Government Revenue Committee on December 11.

After arguing with the governor for a special session to cut up the 1941 sales tax melon of $13,232,996, the group of 15 was told by the chief executive in blistering speech:

"Go back to your home cities. Tell your people that they must sacrifice individually, cut local costs to the bone, stop raising salaries and bend every effort to the winning of this war."

"I hadn't expected to say this, I hadn't wanted to say this, but a special session will be called on request of the federal government for one purpose and one purpose only and that is to promote victorious conduct of the war."

Bricker Has Questions

When Mayor Green began to present the case of local government at the outset of the meeting, the Governor launched an attack of questions and began a presentation of figures that kept the group continually off balance.

After Green, Lausche and others admitted that local governments had no problems now that did not exist when the legislature was in session, Bricker brushed their arguments aside with the opinion that if the legislature hadn't seen fit to take note of them then it would not do so now. He also said directly:

"I cannot speak for the legislature but I have been told that even if I were to call a special session there would be no allocation of this money for the purposes you set forth."

He contended that the surplus in the state treasury was due in a large degree to the annual savings of about $3,000,000 which his administration had made in the operating costs of state government and that the cities, counties and villages would have to settle their own financial difficulties in their own way.

Property Load Low

The governor repeated by cited figures to show that real estate in Ohio carries a lesser tax burden than it does in almost all other states of the union.

Of the 56 American cities having a population of 150,000 or more, Ohio has five in the last 13, with Dayton standing forty-third in the list and Columbus close to the very bottom.

At one juncture, Lausche and Bricker tangled sharply over the assessed valuations of real estate in Ohio, Lausche contending that the State Tax Commission put a throttle on county auditors' figures.

Bricker, looking directly at the

At Last It's on the Screen!

OLSEN and Johnson let fly at each other with seltzer bottles in a scene from "Hellzapoppin'." Broadway's laugh hit now on the screen. Martha Ray, Hugh Herbert, Miss Auer and many others in the cast are responsible for this great success. "Hellzapoppin'" will start Sunday for four days at the new deluxe Grand Theatre.

Cleveland mayor and shaking his finger, said:

"That isn't so."

Lausche replied: "I understand that it is." Bricker replied that he had heard about the charge, had inquired into it and was satisfied to engage in no further argument about it.

Lausche asserted: "I realize from my experience as a judge on the bench that a presiding official exercises a considerable dominance over the lawyer attempting to present his case."

In discussions between Bricker and former Mayor Charles Brennan of Dayton, Brennan argued for a special session to consider the revision of the whole method of allocating taxes collected by the state and redistributed to local government.

Brennan pointed out that his city had increased at least 50,000 in population because of the defense program and was desperately in need of more money to meet operating expenses. The FBI, he said, had recommended that Dayton have at least 400 police instead of its present 200. He contended, also, that it paid a large share of sales taxes and should be entitled to more of the surplus.

Bricker said: "Dayton is a trading center. Much of the sales tax revenue it pays actually comes from the pockets of the people in the surrounding territory."

Brennan replied: "But we have to pave streets for them, maintain bridges, recover stolen cars and do a lot of other things that increase our costs."

Revenues Checked

At this point, Bricker, as in other instances, repeated his contention and cited figures to show that local governments now collect as much local revenue under the 10 mill levy as they did when the limit was 15 mills.

There were numerous questions dealing with the sources of revenue and their final disposition, particularly as to schools. The mayors felt that state contributions toward schools should not be considered in their arguments for a special session because the problem of local governments is now primarily involved with their general funds for operation and maintenance, not with education.

Bricker said that the state government had to consider the tax and revenue picture in a broad way, that money collected by the state for redistribution to local units had to be managed on a basis of population, representation and ability to pay rather than on basis of isolated local needs.

He demanded that Brennan tell why voters in Ohio cities were under the impression that the state was hoarding money that didn't belong to it and consequently were defeating special levies to meet local financial needs.

Purpose of Sales Aired

Brennan said that the impression had gone out officially and unofficially that the sales tax was intended to ease the realty tax burden. Bricker cited the original act to show that this was only one of several purposes behind the sales tax act.

In his conversation with Brennan, Bricker also said:

"When I say what I am about to say I do not do so politically, but am bearing in mind that after the meeting of December 11 a person from Dayton went back there and said that with enough time he could begin 'turning the heat on Bricker' for a special session."

When Brennan declared that the stand of the Dayton man was certainly not proper, Bricker identified the person as Earl Hagerman of president of the Ohio League of Municipalities.

Shortly before his blistering windup about a special session for one purpose only, Bricker told the group that the meeting should never have been called at all and added:

"If it was called before Pearl Harbor, then it should have been called off now. The state has prepared in every possible way to meet defense requirements. It even established a defense council to handle problems now arising."

Lausche demanded to know whether the governor had anticipated the war and said:

"If you did wasn't it your duty as governor to have advised the state of what might be expected?" Bricker said that he didn't anticipate the war but knew long ago that something was bound to happen. He declared it sound financial policy to conserve the state surplus against losses in sales and other tax revenues due to the halt ordered by the federal government in automobile production, the tire rationing and the curb of purchasing power caused by sale of defense stamps and restrictions on installment buying.

Without Painful Backache Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Governor Tells Officials To Start Slashing All Expenses To Bone

OHIO MUST KEEP MONEY

Special Session Will Be Called Only As Means Of Aiding U. S.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—"A special legislative session will be called for one purpose and one purpose only and that is to promote the victorious conduct of the war" was the message carried to home folk today by representatives of Ohio's debt ridden cities following a conference with Gov. John W. Bricker.

The group, led by Mayors Floyd Green of Columbus and Frank J. Lausche of Cleveland, met with the governor yesterday pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Local Government Revenue Committee on December 11.

After arguing with the governor for a special session to cut up the 1941 sales tax melon of $19,202,996, the group of 15 was told by the chief executive in bristling speech:

"Go back to your home cities. Tell your people that they must sacrifice individually, cut local costs to the bone, stop raising salaries and bend every effort to the winning of this war."

"I hadn't expected to say this, I hadn't wanted to say this but a special session will be called on request of the federal government for one purpose and one purpose only and that is to promote victorious conduct of the war."

Bricker Has Questions

When Mayor Green began to present the case of local government at the outset of the meeting, the Governor launched an attack of questions and began a presentation of figures that kept the group continually off balance.

After Green, Lausche and others admitted that local governments had no problems now that did not exist when the legislature was in session, Bricker brushed their arguments aside with the opinion that if the legislature hadn't seen fit to take note of them then it would not do so now. He also said directly:

"I cannot speak for the legislature but I have been told that even if I were to call a special session there would be no allocation of this money for the purposes you set forth."

He contended that the surplus in the state treasury was due in a large degree to the annual savings of about $3,000,000 which his administration had made in the operating costs of state government and that the cities, counties and villages would have to settle their own financial difficulties in their own way.

Property Load Low

The governor repeated by cited figures to show that real estate in Ohio carries a lesser tax burden than it does in almost all other states of the union.

Of the 56 American cities having a population of 150,000 or more, Ohio has five in the last 13, with Dayton standing forty-third in the list and Columbus close to the very bottom.

At one juncture, Lausche and Bricker tangled sharply over the assessed valuations of real estate in Ohio. Lausche contending that the State Tax Commission put a throttle on county auditors' figures.

At Last It's on the Screen!

OLSEN and Johnson let fly at each other with seltzer bottles in a scene from "Hellzapoppin." Broadway's laugh hit now on the screen. Martha Ray, Hugh Herbert, Mis ha Auer and many others in the cast are responsible for this great success. "Hellzapoppin" will start Sunday for four days at the new deluxe Grand Theatre.

Cleveland mayor and shaking his finger, said:

"That isn't so."

Lausche replied:

"I understand that it is."

Bricker replied that he had heard about the charge had inquired into it and was satisfied to engage in no further argument about it.

Lausche asserted:

"I realize from my experience as a judge on the bench that a presiding official exercises a considerable dominance over the lawyer attempting to present his case."

In discussions between Bricker and former Mayor Charles Brennan of Dayton, Brennan argued for a special session to consider the revision of the whole method of allocating taxes collected by the state and redistributed to local government.

Brennan pointed out that his city had increased at least 50,000 in population because of the defense program and was desperately in need of more money to meet operating expenses. The FBI, he said, had recommended that Dayton have at least 400 police instead of its present 200. He contended, also, that it paid a large share of sales taxes and should be entitled to more of the surplus.

Bricker said:

"Dayton is a trading center. Much of the sales tax revenue it pays actually comes from the pockets of the people in the surrounding territory."

Brennan replied:

"But we have to pave streets for them, maintain bridges, recover stolen cars and do a lot of other things that increase our costs."

Revenues Checked

At this point, Bricker, as in other instances, repeated his contention and cited figures to show that local governments now collect as much revenue under the 10 mill levy as they did when the limit was 15 mills.

There were numerous questions dealing with the sources of revenue and their final disposition, particularly as to schools. The mayors felt that state contributions toward schools should not be considered in their arguments for a special session because the problem of local governments is now primarily involved with their general funds for operation and maintenance, not with education.

Bricker said that the state government had to consider the tax and revenue picture in a broad way, that money collected by the state for redistribution to local units had to be managed on a basis of population, representation and ability to pay rather than on basis of isolated local needs.

He demanded that Brennan tell why voters in Ohio cities were under the impression that the state was hoarding money that didn't belong to it and consequently were defeating special levies to meet local financial needs.

Purpose of Sales Aired

Brennan said that the impres-

SERVICE BOARD TO TURN EYES ON RESERVISTS

Men Experienced In Army
Or Navy Asking To Be Deferred Studied

ACTION IS ORDERED

County Group Instructed
To Make Investigation,
File Reports

The Pickaway County draft board was instructed Thursday to make investigations and submit opinions on all military reservists seeking deferment for reasons of occupation or dependency.

The order came from Lieut. Col. Chester W. Goble, state Selective Service director, and follows a call for all regular Army Reserve, enlisted reservists and National Guard reservists to report for duty.

In cases where a reservist is ordered back to duty, he will be given a written order, Colonel Goble said.

The order will include time and place of reporting, and the identity of the draft board to which he also should report. When such an order is issued the draft board will issue the necessary transportation with the required tickets for meals and lodging.

Colonel Goble further said that previous registration or non-registration of reservists will have no bearing on their recall or deferment. If active duty, this matter resting entirely with the Army and Navy.

Refusal of reservists to report will result in investigation, it was said.

ALL OF NATION'S MEN MAY BEAR ARMS FOR U. S.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8—Every man in the United States fit to fight no matter what his present occupation, faces the possibility of being called into the military service before the axis powers are crushed under a knockout blow from the democracies.

This was the blunt warning left today with draft occupational advisers from 11 states by Lt. Col. Joseph F. Battley, chief of the liaison division of the office of the undersecretary of war.

At the same time, Col. Battley outlined to his conferees a vast training program to fill positions in war industry with women, overage men, and men who have been deferred because of physical disabilities.

"It is no exaggeration when I tell you that you are to forget everything you ever knew about selective service and start anew," Col. Battley declared.

"Don't quote to me the language of a single memorandum issued prior to December 7 (the date of the Japanese raid on Pearl Harbor). They are out. Every last, single one of them is out—gone—forgotten. America is at war!"

"Eventually, the only labor supply may be women. The day is past when employers may compete with the Army for physically fit men. That day ended with the treacherous assault on Pearl Harbor. Women can fill many types of jobs, not only as well as but better than men."

Col. Battley foresaw a time before the war ends when 30 percent of total employment in heavy industry must be made up of women. He said already in one California airplane plant 92 percent of the employees in fuselage assembly lines were women.

COOKBOOKLET OF THE WEEK

A Little Forethought Goes A Long
Ways In Kitchen Efficiency.

Plenty of drawers and cupboards for small equipment leave work surface uncluttered in your kitchen. Many time-saving suggestions are included in this week's Cookbooklet, "2,000 Useful Facts About Food."

Kitchen equipment is the "machinery" by which a housewife provides good meals and well-being for her family. In factories important machinery is carefully guarded and protected. But in the home, kitchen utensils all too often get about as much attention as do leftover scraps from the table. Do you know the proper care, and the most efficient place, for your cooking equipment?

Among the 2,000 Useful Facts About Food contained in The New Cookbooklet released by The Herald, are many illuminating bits about equipment and its care. Directions on how to wash aluminum, chrome, copper, enamel, monel metal, iron, tin and wood can be found here. The care of teakettles, teapots, coffeepots and refrigerators, egg beaters, food choppers and stoves is outlined in detail.

A careful study of the outline of where to place kitchen essentials will be rewarded by the saving of many steps and much time. This outline shows which tools should be near the food preparation center, which near the range, which at the sink and which near the refrigerator. See if a little rearranging in your kitchen won't greatly increase the efficiency of your work there! Numerous extra useful gadgets are also listed here, which you may be glad to learn about and put into service.

ALLIED IDEOLOGY

WE AMERICANS today hardly recognize ourselves when we take a good look at the international company we're keeping. At Washington we see Uncle Sam and John Bull sitting on a log and figuring out together the best ways to win friends and influence people. And when it comes to disposing of people they don't like, there's no limit to their chumminess and cooperation. They are now sworn friends and partners in the biggest deals ever cooked up in this world.

More remarkable still is our association with Russia, the "Red Peril" which lately we feared would destroy modern civilization. Now we're chock-a-block with Stalin in the same joint enterprise, and nobody is so rude as to mention bolshevism or the superior merits of private enterprise. And if by chance democracy is mentioned, why, what's a little terminology among friends? Broadly speaking, isn't it the spirit that counts? And aren't we all good democrats together? Or good collectivists, if you prefer to look at it that way. War is a collective process.

As a matter of fact, we're really not very far apart in our present attitudes and procedures. What matters now, is this immense job of saving our skins and property, is not so much our ideology, our technical form of government, but our international behavior in a world crisis.

We see now that our differences are less than our similarities, our grudges less than our basic friendships, in the face of great peril. The external evils that we fight, outside of our own group, are immensely greater. When we have licked them, we can renew our old feuds—if we want to. Probably we won't want to. Blood is thicker than ideology.

PROTECTING THE PRICELESS

THE WAY to prepare is to prepare. Believing that, many large libraries are making sure that no enemy bomb will destroy their treasures. Unlike as it may be that Boston, Detroit or San Francisco will be attacked, it now seems more likely than it did. So forehanded librarians are going over their shelves, selecting irreplaceable treasures, and arranging for a safe place of storage. The great French art museum, the Louvre, is said to have done that before the war, classifying its paintings in three groups: those to be rescued at all costs, those to be saved next, and those that could wait their turn.

All this is very wise. One cause of the Dark Ages that followed the fall of Rome was the destruction of valuable books. No precaution is too great if it will guard against a return of such darkness.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Out and about the village on a morning of great frost. Almost frozen before I reached the post and there found Dr. Courtright and John Boggs in similar condition and frame of mind. Met Ben Metzger, in from Wayne Township, and he told of being in Wyoming once when the mercury dropped to 60 below. Ed Sensesbrenner hailed me and pointed to a hatless man. "Suppose he is comfortable?" Ed asked. I looked at the jeweler who was wearing a cap with fur ear flaps pulled low and decided against the hatless ilk.

The temperature still was near the zero mark when I met Lou Mels. "Invigorating, isn't it?" he said. I had to laugh, even though I walked right away from him without answering. People like that sometimes become violent.

Visited the Coffee Club and there heard Judge Meeker tell that certainty exists that we all will be afoot when our present tires go flat for the final time. Why, even my speedometer froze up on this morning's downtown trip. Hate to think of what would happen to my ears and nose if I had to walk that mile. Or is it a mile? Guess not.

Every day everyone gets a little madder at those Japs. They certainly are not helping their cause when they bomb and machinegun defenseless folk in open towns. Maybe the aviator likes his task and maybe he doesn't, but he is working under definite orders and the sad part of the whole thing is that most of the higher-ups will escape punishment for their criminal orders. The chap in the rising sun plane is certain to be paid off, for the day is coming when he will meet up with an American aviator. I can't make up my mind as to whether I wish him to bounce or just squash when he lands.

Chatted with Talmer Wise, the fire chief, and learned that he has devoted much thought to a possible local emergency and is working hard to provide every possible protection for the village against fire. Our water system, as are, the water systems of most towns, is vulnerable. With it out of commission, a fire could easily develop into a major disaster. So, the chief is asking that the old system of fire cisterns be repaired and made ready for use. That this should be done goes without saying. And the chief has also arranged with Norb Cochran at the Container Corporation to pump well water into the city system in the event of necessity. Good work, Talmer.

Note that the Red Cross campaign is moving right along although still much short of the quota handed us. The Stodge Club gave $15 and may give more, for as Bob Moon put it, if the Japs or Germans get over here "we won't have use for money anyway."

Home in the late afternoon and after eating did get as far as the curb on a projected visit downtown, but the cold decided me against it. Returned to the fire and there spent the evening reading in reasonable comfort. Heard the late news broadcasts that contained nothing new and then headed for bed.

GUERRILLA CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON — Many sage remarks still are being quoted in the wake of Winston Churchill, and one of the most significant was made to friends in regard to future allied strategy against Japan.

Asked what the United States and Britain could do to check Japan, Churchill replied:

"The Japanese have been eating all over the table. They have big appetites and for the time being there may be nothing much we can do about it. But sooner or later we shall turn over the table."

This strategy of turning over the table, in other words directing a move at the main islands of Japan themselves, is something which has always been in the books of the War Plans experts.

However, the American public may have to reconcile itself to more discouraging news from the south Pacific before Allied strength reaches a point where the table can be turned.

General MacArthur's situation in the Philippines has been compared with that of Aguinaldo, the Filipino guerilla leader, who kept American forces at bay for two years after the Spanish-American war. It has been hoped that MacArthur, like Aguinaldo, could fight in the Philippine jungles for an equal period.

However, Aguinaldo never had to cope with the airplane, and MacArthur does. Airplanes can search every inch of Philippine jungle; and in addition, MacArthur's munitions will not hold out forever.

The situation of Corregidor, island fortress at the mouth of Manila Harbor, is better, but even so it is not half as good as the Army's original expectation that it could hold out for a year or so. For apparently, the ground-minded generals of the War Department did not do very much protecting Corregidor from the air. It can hold out for some time, but sooner or later we face the prospect of seeing the Stars and Stripes hauled down from the main islands of the Philippines.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Secretary of War Stimson has been shaking up some of his generals, and has put General Raymond Lee temporarily in charge of military intelligence. Lee was former U. S. military attache in London and an A-1 officer. Army people hope he stays in charge of the intelligence service. . . . To make more office space in Washington, the Farm Credit Administration is being moved to Chicago. . . . Ex-Ambassador Joe Davies has written a book on his experiences in Russia which should be must reading for every member of Congress. It is a magnificent job. . . . Ex-Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy is now in Florida writing a book on his experiences at the Court of St. James's. If Joe is frank—and he usually is—the book ought to be a best seller. . . . Fifty percent of our vitamin A is being sent to England. This, together with the shortage of fish livers and oils from Norway and Japan, is causing a shortage of vitamins in the U.S.A.

Throat Infections of Children Forecast Danger

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE majority of children who become croupy have a benign catarrhal inflammation of the larynx—an inflammation of the larynx with some spasm of the muscles of the throat. The symptoms may range from a transitory hoarseness and some cough, to an alarming stridor or crow on inspiration which usually occurs during the night and is very alarming to parents.

It is well that they should be alarmed, because the early mild condition may run into a much more serious acute laryngotracheitis. The mild condition is usually relieved by ipecac, moist air inhalations and a hot pack. When these simple remedies do not stop the spasm, hoarseness or croupy condition, it is likely to be a swelling of the membrane of the child's trachea or wind pipe, which requires very skillful medical and nursing care.

In other times, before the diphtheria prevention campaign in school children got under way, these severe croupy stridor conditions were usually due to diphtheria. Diphtheria should always be thought of even yet, although it is now an anachronism, almost a thing of the past.

Condition May Be Serious But there is a form of acute inflammation of the larynx and trachea in children not due to diphtheria which may be very serious and even fatal. The germ which causes it is a form of streptococcus. The respiratory distress is caused by the same sort of condition that causes diphtheritic croup, namely swelling and obstruction of the upper respiratory passages so that the child gets its breath with great difficulty. "No doctor," states one who has had a world of experience, "who has ever seen these cases will regard lightly any case of spasmodic laryngitis or simple croup in a child."

The object of treatment is to keep the respiratory passages open until the acute inflammation subsides. Danger is from asphyxia caused by obstruction in the glottis. The hot, moist inhalations, the anti-spasmodic drugs and the hot packs are all designed to further the relaxation of the respiratory passage.

Modern Methods

Modern methods of laryngology have added an improvement by allowing the doctor to suck up retained secretions from around the larynx and the trachea. We all used to hear stories in the diphtheria days of the mother or the nurse who sucked the mucus from the child's throat and saved its life. This modern bronchoscopic suction is a scientific adaptation of the old fashioned practice.

"Croup" used to mean diphtheria. Diphtheria is now nearly a thing of the past. But remember, parents, there is a form of croup still, not diphtheritic in nature but equally dangerous, and when your child, in the course of a chest cold, begins to have difficulty in getting his breath with crowing inspiration, stridor and croupy cough, call all the medical consultation you can get.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. K. D.:—"Is the use of grain alcohol of any benefit in the treatment of acne?"

Answer: Alcohol will dissolve grease and fat and of course an acne skin is greasy. This seems to me the only benefit that would come from its use as you describe it.

No Refuge from Love

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION JERRY BRONFIELD

SYNOPSIS
MOLLA GLENDON comes to New York, seeking refuge from the war that has swept across her native Norway, and from the bombs that shattered London, where she had fled from Oslo. She goes to work in the office of the Whitworth Construction company.

BURTON WHITWORTH, head of the company, was a friend of her deceased father. Molla meets TAYLOR WHITWORTH, handsome and dashing son of Burton, and NEIL LUNDQUIST, young field engineer of the company.

YESTERDAY: Molla is offered a moving picture contract by a talent scout.

CHAPTER EIGHT

MOLLA STARED at the contract she was to sign, then back at Eddie Bryan. She shook her head in bewilderment. Her thoughts were too scattered to collect into one intelligent comment, but she finally managed to say something.

"This is impossible," she whispered. "I did not come to America to become a moving picture star. I have no desire. I—I could not."

Eddie Bryan closed his eyes and pressed his lips together expressively. "There isn't a girl in America who doesn't sometime dream of what I am offering you now," he said. "Why, you'll be rich," he exploded. "You'll have more money than you ever thought was in the world."

He calmed down then. "Sure—sure, so money isn't everything. But did you ever think," he said pointedly, "that with money you could do a lot for your family and friends back home?"

Molla moistened her lips. Her head started to clear. This man was serious. He knew the right people in Hollywood. Back in Oslo, people considered Hollywood a fairyland. That piece of white paper before her was a contract with a Hollywood agent.

But this was all too swift, too incredible. "You must give me time. I must think about it," she said. "Sure—sure. Think it over. I'll phone you in a couple of days."

Molla did her work mechanically at the office the rest of the afternoon. A couple of times Miss Crump looked at her queerly, but she said nothing.

Twice Neil asked her to bring him some estimates, and both times she brought the wrong figures. He chided her good naturedly about it, and then looked at Molla sharply. "Something troubling you, Molla?"

She looked up quickly. "No—no, of course not. I—just got confused in the files."

She returned to her desk, intent upon getting a grip on herself, but the emotional pitch was too great. Molla wasn't vain, but she knew she was pretty. She knew, too, that she could skate as well as most of the stars who toured with the American skating shows.

Hollywood—Hollywood—Hollywood! The name ran through her brain. Fame. Fortune. Money with which to bring her mother to America. A hazardous and expensive proposition right then, but money could do anything, even in occupied Norway.

She thought of what her mother would think. And, of course, Mr. Whitworth. He might not like it, especially after he had gone to all this trouble in her behalf.

Molla knew suddenly that the problem was too much for her. She had to talk to someone. Never had she needed advice so desperately. But who?

Mr. Whitworth would be kindly and considerate, but she knew he would urge her to accept the opportunity whether he thought it was the right thing or not.

Enid Blair? No—not Enid. She would be too thrilled to offer level-headed advice. Enid would be carried away by it all and insist that she take the chance.

Taylor, carefree, ebullient Tay Whitworth—wouldn't care to explore the depth of the problem. His would be a carefree snap judgment.

That left only Neil. She wondered if she knew him well enough to go to him with a matter like this. His was a scientific, impersonal mind. No doubt he would feel ill at ease if she approached him.

The thought struck her suddenly. But of course! It was all so simple. She wanted her advice to be logical and impersonal. Molla knocked on Neil's door. She stood before his desk somewhat stiffly.

"I would like your advice," she blurted out. "I know I should not annoy you with my personal problems here or anywhere, but—but— you see—"

She paused for a moment, frightened by her own blunt approach.

"No, I don't see," he said gently. "but I don't think anyone will object if we steal a few minutes of company time to listen to an employee's problem."

Neil took out his pipe and tapped it against a heavy oak ash tray. He filled it deliberately, methodically, as though he purposely were giving her time to adjust herself to her decision.

"Now then—someone trying to sell you the Empire State Building or the Brooklyn Dodgers? Tell me about it."

His manner put Molla completely at ease. She told him about Eddie Bryan and her opportunity to take a screen test.

"What should I do?" she concluded. "Would Mr. Whitworth be angry? Would I be doing the right thing? Would not I be just one of thousands of girls who go to Hollywood with the same idea in mind? I understand it is a very difficult thing, this—what do you call it—crashing Hollywood."

There wasn't the slightest flicker of emotion in Neil's eyes, and he puffed his pipe two or three times before he replied.

"I can readily see what Hollywood could do with someone as beautiful and talented as you," he said finally, "but at the same time I can understand why you're stumped."

He spoke as matter of factly as though he were discussing the type of steel going into a bridge.

"To all appearances," he went on evenly, "this Bryan is sincere and honest. He can do a lot for you, and now, of course, is the time to capitalize on the publicity you've already received. Two, or even three, months from now may be too late—but I don't think so."

Neil paused for a moment and looked out the window. "Why don't you write to your mother before you make a definite commitment?"

"She would not get the letter for at least six weeks. Perhaps not at all."

Neil shrugged. "What else can I say?"

"You hesitate to say anything—but I want you to. I should not have come here otherwise."

"Okay—you asked for it." He took the pipe out of his mouth. "Tell Bryan you insist on waiting six weeks at least until you can adjust yourself better to America. Tell him it's too big a step to take without getting your feet flat on the ground before you start. By then, perhaps, you will be able to make a definite decision for yourself. That really is what you should do, you know."

Molla nodded. "I know. So now you must think I was a silly girl to bother you with my problems."

"On the contrary, I am flattered. But tell me—why DID you come to me instead of the Whitworths? You hardly know me."

She shrugged. "You have an honest face," she said simply, and Neil laughed heartily.

The door opened just then and Tay stepped in.

"Tell me—I want to laugh, too," he said. Molla flashed a warning look at Neil.

The sound faculties should be supported by sharpened intuitions, hunches and occult, psychic or peculiar inner leadings. But these should all be submitted to the court of last resort—logic, reason and the wise counsel of elders, superiors and the dictates of established order. Impetuosity, sarcasm and reckless word and act might undermine extraordinary opportunities. Great intellectual and inventive genius seeks expression.

A child born on this day should be exceptionally endowed with intellectual faculties, sustained by inner spiritual, psychic, intuitive creative urges, seeking expression in some sort of unique form. It should have advanced ideals and a most winning personality.

ALLIED IDEOLOGY
WE AMERICANS today hardly recognize ourselves when we take a good look at the international company we're keeping. At Washington we see Uncle Sam and John Bull sitting on a log and figuring out together the best ways to win friends and influence people. And when it comes to disposing of people they don't like, there's no limit to their chumminess and cooperation. They are now sworn friends and partners in the biggest deals ever cooked up in this world.

More remarkable still is our association with Russia, the "Red Peril" which lately we feared would destroy modern civilization. Now we're chock-a-block with Stalin in the same joint enterprise, and nobody is so rude as to mention bolshevism or the superior merits of private enterprise. And if by chance democracy is mentioned, why, what's a little terminology among friends? Broadly speaking, isn't it the spirit that counts? And aren't we all good democrats together? Or good collectivists, if you prefer to look at it that way. War is a collective process.

As a matter of fact, we're really not very far apart in our present attitudes and procedures. What matters now, is this immense job of saving our skins and property, is not so much our ideology, our technical form of government, but our international behavior in a world crisis.

We see now that our differences are less than our similarities, our grudges less than our basic friendships, in the face of great peril. The external evils that we fight, outside of our own group, are immensely greater. When we have licked them, we can renew our old feuds—if we want to. Probably we won't want to. Blood is thicker than ideology.

PROTECTING THE PRICELESS
THE WAY to prepare is to prepare. Believing that many large libraries are making sure that no enemy bomb will destroy their treasures. Unlikely as it may be that Boston, Detroit or San Francisco will be attacked, it now seems more likely than it did. So forehanded librarians are going over their shelves, selecting irreplaceable treasures, and arranging for a safe place of storage. The great French art museum, the Louvre, is said to have done that before the war, classifying its paintings in three groups: those to be rescued at all costs, those to be saved next, and those that could wait their turn.

All this is very wise. One cause of the Dark Ages that followed the fall of Rome was the destruction of valuable books. No precaution is too great if it will guard against a return of such darkness.

PAGES FROM THE DIARY OF AN
Antiquated Reporter:
Out and about the ville on a morning of great frost. Almost frozen before I reached the post and there found Dr. Courtright and John Boggs in similar condition and frame of mind. Met Ben Metzger, in from Wayne Township, and he told of being in Wyoming once when the mercury dropped to 60 below. Ed Sensesbrenner hailed me and pointed to a hatless man. "Suppose he is comfortable?" Ed asked. I looked at the jeweler who was wearing a cap with fur ear flaps pulled low and decided against the hatless ilk.

The temperature still was near the zero mark when I met Lou Mehs. "Invigorating, isn't it?" he said. I had to laugh, even though I walked right away from him without answering. People like that sometimes become violent.

Visited the Coffee Club and there heard Judge Meeker tell that certainty exists that we all will be afoot when our present tires go flat for the final time. Why, even my speedometer froze up on this morning's downtown trip. Hate to think of what would happen to my ears and nose if I had to walk that mile. Or is it a mile? Guess not.

Every day everyone gets a little madder at those Japs. They certainly are not helping their cause when they bomb and machinegun defenseless folk in open towns. Maybe the aviator likes his task and maybe he doesn't, but he is working under definite orders and the sad part of the whole thing is that most of the higher-ups will escape punishment for their criminal orders. The chap in the rising sun plane is certain to be paid off, for the day is coming when he will meet up with an American aviator. I can't make up my mind as to whether I wish him to bounce or just squash when he lands.

Chatted with Talmer Wise, the fire chief, and learned that he has devoted much thought to a possible local emergency and is working hard to provide every possible protection for the village against fire. Our water system, as are, the water systems of most towns, is vulnerable. With it out of commission, a fire could easily develop into a major disaster. So, the chief is asking that the old system of fire cisterns be repaired and made ready for use. That this should be done goes without saying. And the chief has also arranged with Norb Cochran at the Container Corporation to pump well water into the city system in the event of necessity. Good work, Talmer.

Note that the Red Cross campaign is moving right along although still much short of the quota handed us. The Stooze Club gave $15 and may give more for, as Bob Moon put it, if the Japs or Germans get over here "we won't have use for money anyway."

Home in the late afternoon and after eating did get as far as the curb on a projected visit downtown, but the cold decided me against it. Returned to the fire and there spent the evening reading in reasonable comfort. Heard the late news broadcasts that contained nothing new and then headed for bed.

GUERRILLA CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON — Many sage remarks still are being quoted in the wake of Winston Churchill, and one of the most significant was made to friends in regard to future allied strategy against Japan.

Asked what the United States and Britain could do to check Japan, Churchill replied:

"The Japanese have been eating all over the table. They have big appetites and for the time being there may be nothing much we can do about it. But sooner or later we shall turn over the table."

This strategy of turning over the table, in other words directing a move at the main islands of Japan themselves, is something which has always been in the books of the War Plans experts.

However, the American public may have to reconcile itself to more discouraging news from the south Pacific before Allied strength reaches a point where the table can be turned.

General MacArthur's situation in the Philippines has been compared with that of Aguinaldo, the Filipino guerilla leader, who kept American forces at bay for two years after the Spanish-American war. It has been hoped that MacArthur, like Aguinaldo, could fight in the Philippine jungles for an equal period.

However, Aguinaldo never had to cope with the airplane, and MacArthur does. Airplanes can search every inch of Philippine jungle; and in addition, MacArthur's munitions will not hold out forever.

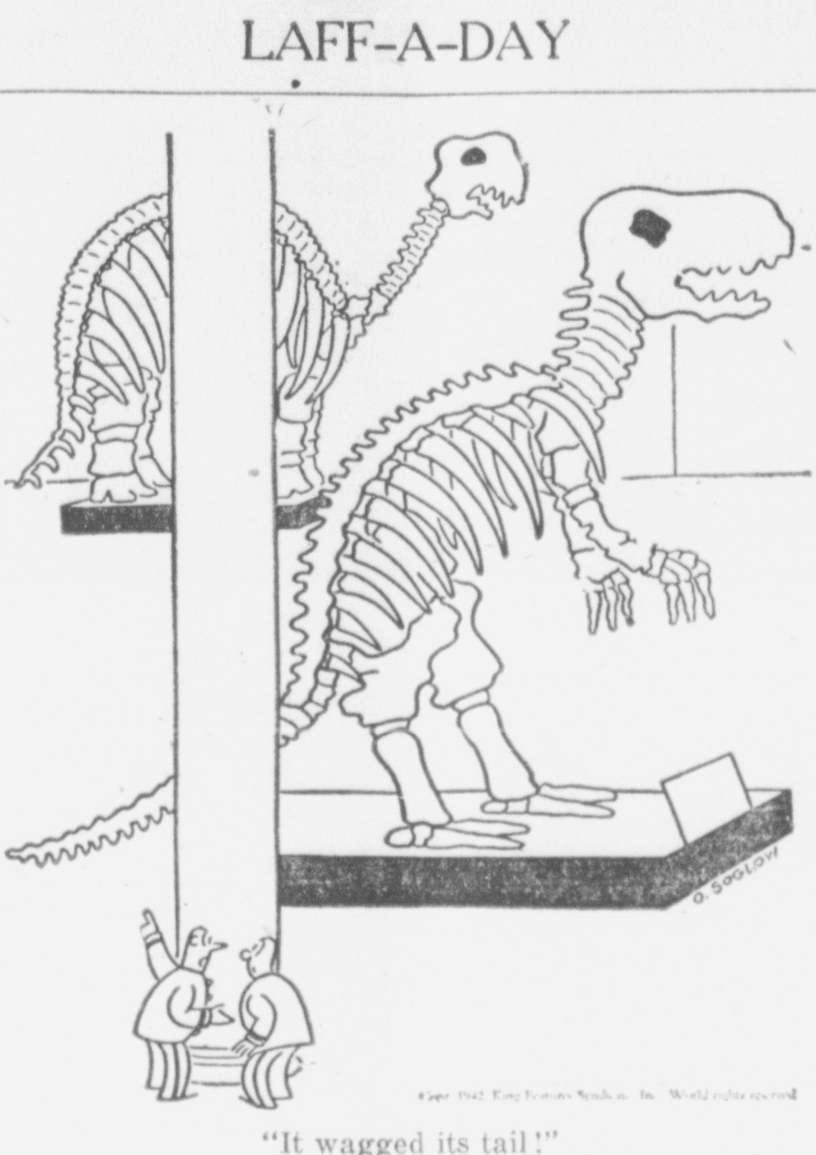

The situation of Corregidor, island fortress at the mouth of Manila Harbor, is better, but even so it is not half as good as the Army's original expectation that it could hold out for a year or so. For apparently, the ground-minded generals of the War Department did not do very much protecting Corregidor from the air. It can hold out for some time, but sooner or later we face the prospect of seeing the Stars and Stripes hauled down from the main islands of the Philippines.

Throat Infections of Children Forecast Danger

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE majority of children who become croupy have a benign catarrhal inflammation of the larynx—an inflammation of the larynx with some spasm of the muscles of the throat. The symptoms may range from a transitory hoarseness

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

ness and some cough, to an alarming stridor or crow on inspiration which usually occurs during the night and is very alarming to parents.

It is well that they should be alarmed, because the early mild condition may run into a much more serious acute laryngotracheitis. The mild condition is usually relieved by ipecac, moist air inhalations and a hot pack. When these simple remedies do not stop the spasm, hoarseness or croupy condition, it is likely to be a swelling of the membrane of the child's trachea or wind pipe, which requires very skillful medical and nursing care.

In other times, before the diphtheria prevention campaign in school children got under way, these severe croupy stridor conditions were usually due to diphtheria. Diphtheria should always be thought of even yet, although it is now an anachronism, almost a thing of the past.

Condition May Be Serious

But there is a form of acute inflammation of the larynx and trachea in children not due to diphtheria which may be very serious and even fatal. The germ which causes it is a form of streptococcus. The respiratory distress is caused by the same sort of condition that causes diphtheritic croup, namely swelling and obstruction of the upper respiratory passages so that the child gets its breath with great difficulty.

"No doctor," states one who has had a world of experience, "who has ever seen these cases will regard lightly any case of spasmodic laryngitis or simple croup in a child." The object of treatment is to keep the respiratory passages open until the acute inflammation subsides. Danger is from asphyxia caused by obstruction in the glottis. The hot, moist inhalations, the anti-spasmodic drugs and the hot packs are all designed to further the relaxation of the respiratory passage.

Modern Methods

Modern methods of laryngology have added an improvement by allowing the doctor to suck up retained secretions from around the larynx and the trachea. We all used to hear stories in the diphtheria days of the mother or the nurse who sucked the mucus from the child's throat and saved its life. This modern bronchoscopic suction is a scientific adaptation of the old fashioned practice.

"Croup" used to mean diphtheria. Diphtheria is now nearly a thing of the past. But remember, parents, there is a form of croup still, not diphtheritic in nature but equally dangerous, and when your child, in the course of a chest cold, begins to have difficulty in getting his breath with crowing inspiration, stridor and croupy cough, call all the medical consultation you can get.

No Refuge from Love

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION — JERRY BRONDFIELD

SYNOPSIS
MOLLA GLENDON comes to New York, seeking refuge from the war that has swept across her native Norway, and from the bombs that shattered London, where she had fled from Oslo. She goes to work in the office of the Whitworth Construction company.

BURTON WHITWORTH, head of the company, was a friend of her deceased father. Molla meets

TAYLOR WHITWORTH, handsome and dashing son of Burton, and NEIL LUNDQUIST, young field engineer of the company.

YESTERDAY: Molla is offered a moving picture contract by a talent scout.

CHAPTER EIGHT
MOLLA STARED at the contract she was to sign, then back at Eddie Bryan. She shook her head in bewilderment. Her thoughts were too scattered to collect into one intelligent comment, but she finally managed to say something.

"This is impossible," she whispered. "I did not come to America to become a moving picture star. I have no desire. I—I could not."

Eddie Bryan closed his eyes and pressed his lips together expressively. "There isn't a girl in America who doesn't sometime dream of what I am offering you now," he said. "Why, you'll be rich," he exploded. "You'll have more money than you ever thought was in the world."

He calmed down then. "Sure—sure, so money isn't everything. But did you ever think," he said pointedly, "that with money you could do a lot for your family and friends back home?"

Molla moistened her lips. Her head started to clear. This man was serious. He knew the right people in Hollywood. Back in Oslo, people considered Hollywood a fairytale. That piece of white paper before her was a contract with a Hollywood agent.

But this was all too swift, too incredulous. "You must give me time. I must think about it," she said. "Sure—sure. Think it over. I'll phone you in a couple of days."

Molla did her work mechanically at the office the rest of the afternoon. A couple of times Miss Crump looked at her queerly, but she said nothing.

Twice Neil asked her to bring him some estimates, and both times she brought the wrong figures. He chided her good naturedly about it, and then looked at Molla sharply. "Something troubling you, Molla?"

She looked up quickly. "No—no, of course not. I—just got confused in the files."

She returned to her desk, intent

upon getting a grip on herself, but the emotional clutch was too great. Molla wasn't vain, but she knew she was pretty. She knew, too, that she could skate as well as most of the stars who toured with the American skating shows.

Hollywood—Hollywood—Hollywood! The name ran through her brain. Fame. Fortune. Money with which to bring her mother to America. A hazardous and expensive proposition right then, but money could do anything, even in occupied Norway.

She thought of what her mother would think. And, of course, Mr. Whitworth. He might not like it, especially after he had gone to all this trouble in her behalf.

Molla knew suddenly that the problem was too much for her. She had to talk to someone. Never had she needed advice so desperately. But who?

Mr. Whitworth would be kind and considerate, but she knew he would urge her to accept the opportunity whether he thought it was the right thing or not.

Enid Blair? No—not Enid. She would be too thrilled to offer level-headed advice. Enid would be carried away by it all and insist that she take the chance.

Tay—carefree, ebullient Tay Whitworth—wouldn't care to explore the depth of the problem. His would be a carefree snap judgment.

That left only Neil. She wondered if she knew him well enough to go to him with a matter like this. His was a scientific, impersonal mind. No doubt he would feel ill at ease if she approached him.

The thought struck her suddenly. But of course! It was all so simple. She wanted her advice to be logical and impersonal. Molla knocked on Neil's door. She stood before his desk somewhat stiffly.

"I would like your advice," she blurted out. "I know I should not annoy you with my personal problems here or anywhere, but—but— you see—"

She paused for a moment, frightened by her own blunt approach. "No, I don't see," he said gently, "but I don't think anyone will object if we steal a few minutes of company time to listen to an employee's problem."

Neil took out his pipe and tapped it against a heavy oak ash tray. He filled it deliberately, methodically, as though he purposely were giving her time to adjust herself to her decision.

"Now then—someone trying to sell you the Empire State Building or the Brooklyn Dodgers? Tell me about it."

His manner put Molla completely at ease. She told him about Eddie Bryan and her opportunity to take a screen test.

"What should I do?" she concluded. "Would Mr. Whitworth be angry? Would I be doing the right thing? Would I be just one of thousands of girls who go to Hollywood with the same idea in mind? I understand it is a very difficult thing, this—what do you call it—crashing Hollywood."

There wasn't the slightest flicker of emotion in Neil's eyes, and he puffed his pipe two or three times before he replied.

"I can readily see what Hollywood could do with someone as beautiful and talented as you," he said finally, "but at the same time I can understand why you're stumped."

He spoke as matter of factly as though he were discussing the type of steel going into a bridge.

"To all appearances," he went on evenly, "this Bryan is sincere and honest. He can do a lot for you, and now, of course, is the time to capitalize on the publicity you've already received. Two, or even three, months from now may be too late—but I don't think so."

Neil paused for a moment and looked out the window. "Why don't you write to your mother before you make a definite commitment?"

"She would not get the letter for at least six weeks. Perhaps not at all."

Neil shrugged. "What else can I say?"

"You hesitate to say anything—but I want you to. I should not have come here otherwise."

"Okay—you asked for it." He took the pipe out of his mouth. "Tell Bryan you insist on waiting six weeks at least until you can adjust yourself better to America. Tell him it's too big a step to take without getting your feet flat on the ground before you start. By then, perhaps, you will be able to make a definite decision for yourself. That really is what you should do, you know."

Molla nodded. "I know. So now you must think I was a silly girl to bother you with my problems."

"On the contrary, I am flattered. But tell me—why DID you come to me instead of the Whitworths? You hardly know me."

She shrugged. "You have an honest face," she said simply, and Neil laughed heartily.

The door opened just then and Tay stepped in.

"Tell me—I want to laugh, too," he said. Molla flashed a warning look at Neil.

A child born on this day should be exceptionally endowed with intellectual faculties, sustained by inner spiritual, psychic, intuitive creative urges, seeking expression in some sort of unique form. It should have advanced ideals and a most winning personality.

Altar Society Conducts Business, Enjoys Program

$10 Donation Made; Another Party To Be January 20

Thirty members of the Altar Society of the St. Joseph's Catholic Church gathered Wednesday in the church social room for the January session and voted a donation of $10 to the Red Cross drive during the business meeting in charge of Mrs. J. C. Rader, president of the group.

Outstanding in its timely interest was the fine paper on "Tabernacles and Tents," prepared by Miss Elizabeth Drum and read by Father Edward J. Reidy. The theme concerned the spiritual welfare of the boys in the many army stations, and gave a comprehensive outline of the building of chapels and the provision of chaplains for those of various faiths. Open discussion followed.

Mrs. Thomas Lake was named chairman of the next games party which will be Tuesday, January 20, in the church social room.

The February committee was named. Mrs. Ralph Head being made chairman. Others on the committee are Mrs. Helen Stout, Mrs. Mary Maloney, Mrs. Doyle Hase, Mrs. Robert Miller, Mrs. Virginia Burns, Mrs. John Boggs, Mrs. Joe Burns, Mrs. Charles Rittinger, Mrs. Samuel Groom and Mrs. Margaret McKenzie.

An enjoyable lunch was served during the social hour by Mrs. Mark Armstrong, Mrs. T. O. Gilliland, Miss Mary Conner, Mrs. George Groom, Mrs. Andrew Roundhouse, Mrs. John Drum, Mrs. Sheldon Mader, Mrs. Fred Roundhouse, Mrs. Jake Carle, Miss Anna Butt and Mrs. William Goode.

Emmett's Chapel Aid
Mrs. E. R. Brooks, Mrs. Ralph Head, Mrs. Alva Dyer and Mrs. Bernard Carle were present in addition to 18 members when Mrs. Cora Rader Hood and Miss Nettie Rader entertained the Emmett's Chapel Ladies' Aid Society, Wednesday, at a delightful meeting at their home in Pickaway Township.

A donation of $10 was voted the Red Cross Drive.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was the reading of several letters from the boys at Camp Shelby, Miss., who had been remembered with Christmas boxes by the society. The gifts were deeply appreciated.

Mrs. Austin Wilson, president, conducted their devotion. Miss Gladys Rader read the lesson from the 23rd Psalm, the group repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Mrs. Clarence Maxson, secretary, reported the last meeting.

Mrs. Brooks, Pickaway County field woman for the AAA, interested the members with her talk on "The Food for Defense."

Lunch was served during the informal social hour.

Mrs. Harry Wright and Mrs. E. C. Wilkins will entertain the society Wednesday, February 4.

Mt. Pleasant W.S.C.S.
Twenty-one members and guests were present when the W.S.C.S. of Mt. Pleasant Church met Tuesday for the regular meeting. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Edgar Carmean, president. The devotionals were led by Mrs. Frank Collett, with prayer during the period by the Rev. D. V. Whitenack.

Election of officers resulted in Mrs. Gordon Rihl being chosen as president; Mrs. Clarke Smith, vice president; Mrs. William Puffinbarger, secretary, Mrs. Fred Baird,

MINOR CHANGES MADE IN STATE FISHING LAWS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8—Very few changes were made in the fishing regulations for the coming year by the Ohio Conservation and Natural Resources commission meeting yesterday. Commissioner Don Waters pointed out today.

The commission adopted with slight changes the tentative regulations which were announced following their December meeting when consideration was given to seasons, legal lengths and bag limits.

One change made, however, removes the legal lengths on bluegills in both inland and Lake Erie districts. The legal length formerly had been five inches. The daily bag limit will remain at 20.

Seasons adopted for the various species were the same as last year. Open seasons established are as follows:

Black bass: largemouth, small mouth and Kentucky or spotted bass, June 16, 1942 to April 30, 1943, in the inland district, and July 1, 1942 to May 24, 1943, in the Lake Erie districts.

Trout: Brook, brown and rainbow, April 15, 1942 to September 15, 1942.

Since the legislature has given the division jurisdiction over tur-

CORVALLIS, Ore., Jan. 8—Campus rumors that Lon Stiner, coach of the Rose Bowl champion Oregon State football squad, is looking over midwest coaching jobs, particularly the berth at Nebraska, his alma mater, refused to be downed today despite lack of official comment.

The rumors were strengthened when Stiner stopped over in Nebraska to visit his parents, while the Oregon State squad continued on to Corvallis, where they are due today.

LOUIS VICIOUS AS HE DRILLS FOR BAER BOUT

Charity Contest May See Champion Tearing In For Early Kill

By Jack Mahon

GREENWOOD LAKE, N. Y. Jan. 8—Here in the snowy hills of New York, on the eve of a milestone in boxing history—an all-out charity fight for the world's heavyweight championship—one fact stood out as sharply today as the fingers of the lakeside trees, etched against a winter sky. Joe Louis has gone back; gone back to the lean and hungry days when he came out of the Alabama cotton fields, a desperate unknown, to set the boxing world on fire.

Never, in the six years the Bomber has been on the big time, had he looked more vicious, more deadly in training. And if he fights the same way tomorrow night, when he meets Buddy Baer in a 15 round bout for the benefit of the Naval Relief Society at Madison Square Garden, it will be just too bad for young Mr. Baer.

Louis ripped canvas-backed sparring mates to shreds in his drills when he was first brought out of Detroit into New York for a build-up, climaxed by his butchery of Primo Carnera in '35. He split their lips and their noses, never stopped hammering them and many of them quit. He eased off his mates after he had been established as one of the most deadly punchers in all heavyweight history and after he won the title from Jimmy Braddock in '37, he became very considerate of his sparring mates.

1938 Recalled

He cut loose only one other time. That was when he started work for his celebrated return bout with Max Baer, the only man ever to knock him out, in '35. Joe was vicious then, too. Not quite as vicious as he was a hungry, colored boy trying to establish himself—but plenty tough. Louis annihilated Carnera and put Schmeling in a hospital. He had to lick the giant or be called a second rat; he hated Schmeling. Joe doesn't have any such feeling toward young Baer, but since the champion is donating his entire purse to the Naval Relief Society—he cannot take any chances of losing his title tomorrow evening.

Joe has floored all of his sparring mates, but George Nicholson, in the 64 rounds he has boxed here for this fight. He has been particularly destructive against one Dee Amos, whom he has knocked out three or four times. Yesterday, in his final drill, he boxed one round each with Nicholson, Dan Monroe and George Fitch. Poor Amos lasted only half a round, Louis splitting his lower lip wide open with a vicious right uppercut.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 8—Buddy Baer concluded his training schedule for his championship fight with Joe Louis tomorrow night confident of victory.

"I'm ready to fight in any way that Louis chooses," he said, "I'll try to stay in close because I don't think Louis is so good inside." Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, stated again that he would ask the New York Boxing Commission to omit consideration of Arthur Donovan as referee for the fight. Donovan officiated at the Washington battle between Baer and Louis and disqualified Baer because his seconds failed to leave the ring at the opening gong for the seventh round.

MEN WHO MAKE GRID DECISIONS TO ALTER RULES

CHICAGO, Jan. 8—Football teams frequently throw one pass after another on successive plays, but the nation's high school elevens next fall may be tossing two forwards during a single down, it was disclosed today in Chicago.

A change in the rules permitting two forward passes in a single play if both are tossed from behind the line of scrimmage will be discussed during the annual meeting of the men who make the rules for prep football, according to Henry V. Porter of Chicago, executive secretary of the National Federation of State High School Athletic Associations. The federation meeting opens today and continues through Sunday.

The double-forward pass play was tried out in special games during the regular seasons of 1940 and 1941 and spring practice sessions of both years by 59 high schools from all parts of the nation, and all reported favorably on the play, Porter said. A poll of 3,000 coaches, officials and athletic administrators revealed a ratio of 5 to 1 for the rule change, he added.

Should the play be made legal, it probably would not be used so frequently as to turn prep football into "outdoor basketball," Porter asserted.

"Deception and clever ball handling are required to complete two passes in this fashion," he pointed out.

In addition to the double-pass proposal, delegates to the meeting will vote on four other proposed rule changes having to do with the pass interference penalty; uniformity in regulations governing free kicks; violations of the center "snap" rules, and changes of "spot" penalty enforcement on a loose-ball play.

MINOR CHANGES MADE IN STATE FISHING LAWS

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8—Very few changes were made in the fishing regulations for the coming year by the Ohio Conservation and Natural Resources Commission meeting yesterday. Commissioner Don Waters pointed out today.

The commission adopted with slight changes the tentative regulations which were announced following their December meeting when consideration was given to seasons, legal lengths and bag limits.

One change made, however, removes the legal lengths on bluegills in both inland and Lake Erie districts. The legal length formerly had been five inches. The daily bag limit will remain at 20.

Seasons adopted for the various species were the same as last year. Open seasons established are as follows:

Black bass: largemouth, small mouth and Kentucky or spotted bass, June 16, 1942 to April 30, 1943, in the inland district, and July 1, 1942 to May 24, 1943, in the Lake Erie districts.

Trout: Brook, brown and rainbow, April 15, 1942 to September 15, 1942.

Since the legislature has given the division jurisdiction over turtles and frogs, the commission adopted a closed season on frogs through the state from May 1 to June 15, with the same closed season on turtles, except that the regulation on turtles applies only to streams. Frogs and turtles, in season, may be taken by any method except traps, must be at least six inches square mesh and without leads or wings.

Taking of all kinds of bait was prohibited from 9 p. m. to 4 a. m. The regulation covering weights on trot lines was changed reducing the weight from 75 pounds to 50 pounds.

Firemen Battle Blaze In Below Zero Weather

Dr. P. C. Routzahn Residence On Fire Late At Night; Frozen Spray Covers Men Fighting Flames

In sub-zero temperatures Wednesday night firemen fought a blaze at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. P. C. Routzahn, North Court Street, for nearly two hours.

Firemen were covered with frozen spray and fire hose was ice-coated before the flames were finally brought under control about 12:30 a. m. The fire was discovered about 11:15 p. m.

Fire Chief Talmer Wise estimated the damage to the building at between $300 and $400. He placed no estimate on the damage done to supplies and equipment in Dr. Routzahn's office on the ground floor.

LATEST FILM COLONY VOWS ARE DELAYED

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8 — Because retakes are necessary on the box office king's latest movie, the wedding of Mickey Rooney and Ava Gardner, reportedly scheduled to take place tomorrow in Santa Barbara, today was postponed for a few days.

The youthful film pair were trying hard to keep the date and place of their wedding secret because they want to avoid crowds, but it was generally believed that the ceremony will be performed either Saturday or Sunday.

The wedding party will include the mothers of the couple, Mickey's publicity agent, Les Patterson, and the bride's sister, Beatrice.

Unless there is a last minute change of plans, Mickey and his bride will spend at least part of their honeymoon in Boston.

Rooney is due to appear there January 22 at a War Fund Benefit and according to intimates of the star his bride almost certainly will accompany him.

SURGEONS BEAT MAN'S HEART TO SAVE HIS LIFE

CHICAGO, Jan. 8—How two Boston surgeons kept a patient alive by "simulating" the beating of his heart for 20 minutes was related today in the current issue of the journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Herbert D. Adams and Dr. Leo V. Hand were operating on a man's left lung when his heart stopped beating. They immediately injected heart stimulants and one of them began artificial circulation of the blood by rhythmic compression of the heart by hand. The other administered artificial respiration by rhythmic pressure on the rebreathing bag used in administering the anesthetic.

Shortly after the heart resumed its natural beating, the patient began breathing again, and his color, which had been of a violent hue, returned to normal.

Then the surgeons completed their operation on the lung, administering only oxygen.

The patient left the hospital in good condition in two months.

BREEDS GREEN MICE

LONDON—After breeding 50 generations of mice, Dr. Rosslyn Bruce, rector of Hurstmonceux, Sussex, has succeeded in breeding green specimens. The first of these was grass green, and its first offspring was bottle green. Now he has the first family from the bottle green mouse. Their "chief tendency" is back to grass green, but two of the family are white—the first sign of the original Japanese white strain for many generations.

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX

No. 4

How To Avoid Common Errors

Twenty-two million persons, firms, and corporations, it is estimated, will probably file income-tax returns this year. These returns begin to trickle in around January 1. Every return for the calendar year 1941 must be in by midnight of March 16. In order to handle the enormous volume of work alone entailed of receiving these returns, the Bureau of Internal Revenue has greatly increased its staff in its several district offices. The experience of former years shows that the Bureau is always swamped with late returns. If taxpayers will file their returns early, they will find that this will be mutually beneficial to them and to the Government.

A large number of these returns contain errors which, if not corrected by the audit, would result to the disadvantage of the taxpayer. Many persons pay in more than the amount of the tax due; others fail to take advantage of the personal exemption, the credit allowed for dependents, or deductions from gross income to which they are entitled.

In making out your income-tax return, read carefully and study the instructions that accompany the forms on which the tax is computed. If you need more information, it may be obtained at the office of the collector of internal revenue, deputy collector, or an internal-revenue agent in charge. When you visit an internal-revenue office to get assistance in making out your return, take a copy of your 1940 return with you.

WLW Cincinnati—may be set up in Iceland to drown out Hitler's rasping broadcasts to the German people.

For many years WLW operated a 500,000 watt station in Cincinnati, but was forced by the Federal Communications Commission to reduce to 50,000 watts, which is the maximum for ordinary commercial stations in the U.S.A. Therefore, WLW has now offered its big 500,000 watt set to the Government to be established in Iceland. Since Hitler's stations are nowhere near as strong as 500,000 watts, WLW's beams from Iceland could drown out his voice every time he went on the air.

Furthermore, WLW Iceland would not operate on short wave, which the German people are not permitted to hear. It would operate on a standard broadcasting beam and would come in over the ordinary German radio. By turning a button in the station in Iceland, the wave-length could be changed to cut in on any German program.

There is one catch in the proposal, however. WLW Cincinnati wants to make a deal with the Government whereby it would be permitted to set up another 500,000 watt station in the United States in return for sending its equipment to Iceland.

Note: The 100,000 watt radio station which the Donovan Committee is transferring from Schemm, N. Y., to San Francisco for propaganda broadcasts to Japan is for short wave broadcasts only.

SCRAP IRON WENT TO JAPAN

It may be that those who let millions of tons of scrap iron go to Japan are not too anxious to advertise our present dearth of scrap, but the real fact is that it is so serious as to cause the shutdown of nine blast furnaces in Youngstown, Ohio, alone.

To meet the shortage, the OPM has been conducting an experimental campaign to collect scrap iron in Erie, Pa., and is launching other campaigns in Boston, Pittsburgh, Bridgeport and Akron. However, the campaign is going very slowly. Chief trouble is that collections are made through the normal scrap iron trade.

Therefore, it looks as if the American public might have to take things in hand. A survey of Butler County, Ohio, shows that every farmer has an average of about 500 pounds of usable scrap iron and rubber rusting or rotting behind his barn. On this basis, the OPM estimates that it should be possible to collect 1,500,000 tons of scrap from American farmers.

Not many people realize the importance which scrap plays in the iron and steel industry. Ordinarily, steel is made fifty percent from ore and fifty percent from scrap iron. But today ordinary supplies of scrap iron are diminished, not only by previous sales to Japan but by the fact that war industries supply no scrap. Many tanks, guns, and military motor trucks are shipped off to Egypt, Malaya or Russia. They never come back. Ordinarily, industry supplies its own scrap iron from junked automobiles, etc. But now there will be fewer automobiles to junk.

So the scrap iron problem is one which will require every farmer and householder to look around behind his barn or in his basement to see what he can spare for war industries.

GOODBYE, LEAD

You can check off lead as the next strategic material to be put under interdict for civilian use. OPM's banning order will be issued shortly. That will mean the end of lead foil and numerous other items of normal everyday use. One possible exception may be lead for automobile batteries, but even that will be under severe restrictions.

Reason for the ban is inadequacy of domestic supply to meet the increasing need for bullets. War production tables call for a lead consumption of 60,000 tons monthly by June; 100,000 tons monthly by next January. For military reasons, figures on U. S. supply can not be disclosed, but it is below what is needed even with production increases now under way plus imports from Canada, Mexico and other foreign sources. So civilian use will be restricted for the duration.

FIRE DAMAGES SHIP ANCHORED AT GOTHAM PIER

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—A spectacular fire of unknown origin swept the South African steamship line pier in the Hudson River today and damaged the S. S. Lancaster.

The flames swept through the giant shed with unusual speed but prompt action in towing the Lancaster into the middle of the river saved the vessel from destruction.

Five alarms were sounded by the fire department, bringing all available equipment to battle the blaze.

Firemen fought the fire in near zero weather and were hampered further by a high wind that threatened to spread the flames to adjoining docks.

The Lancaster suffered little damage, it was said. The crew was able to extinguish the blaze aboard its deck after the ship reached midstream.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents were summoned to investigate possible sabotage even before the fire was under complete control.

The Lancaster was unloading coconut oil and copra when the fire which started on the pier, was discovered by a watchman.

Firemen Battle Blaze In Below Zero Weather

Dr. P. C. Routzahn Residence On Fire Late At Night; Frozen Spray Covers Men Fighting Flames

In sub-zero temperatures Wednesday night firemen fought a blaze at the residence of Dr. P. C. Routzahn, North Court Street, for nearly two hours.

Firemen were covered with frozen spray and fire hose was ice-coated before the flames were finally brought under control about 12:30 a. m. The fire was discovered about 11:15 p. m.

Fire Chief Talmer Wise estimated the damage to the building at between $300 and $400. He placed no estimate on the damage done to supplies and equipment in Dr. Routzahn's office on the ground floor.

LATEST FILM COLONY VOWS ARE DELAYED

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8 — Because retakes are necessary on the box office king's latest movie, the wedding of Mickey Rooney and Ava Gardner, reportedly scheduled to take place tomorrow in Santa Barbara, today was postponed for a few days.

The youthful film pair were trying hard to keep the date and place of their wedding secret because they want to avoid crowds, but it was generally believed that the ceremony will be performed either Saturday or Sunday.

The wedding party will include the mothers of the couple, Mickey's publicity agent, Les Paterson, and the bride's sister, Beatrice.

Unless there is a last minute change of plans, Mickey and his bride will spend at least part of their honeymoon in Boston.

Rooney is due to appear there January 22 at a War Fund Benefit and according to intimates of the star his bride almost certainly will accompany him.

SURGEONS BEAT MAN'S HEART TO SAVE HIS LIFE

CHICAGO, Jan. 8 — How two Boston surgeons kept a patient alive by "stimulating" the beating of his heart for 20 minutes was related today in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Herbert D. Adams and Dr. Leo V. Hand were operating on a man's left lung when his heart stopped beating. They immediately injected heart stimulants and one of them began artificial circulation of the blood by rhythmic compression of the heart by hand. The other administered artificial respiration by rhythmic pressure on the rebreathing bag used in administering the anesthetic.

Shortly after the heart resumed its natural beating, the patient began breathing again and his color, which had been of a violent hue, returned to normal.

Then the surgeons completed their operation on the lung, administering only oxygen.

The patient left the hospital in good condition in two months.

Their "chief tendency" is back to grass green, but two of the family are white—the first sign of the original Japanese white strain for many generations.

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX

No. 4

How To Avoid Common Errors

Twenty-two million persons, firms, and corporations, it is estimated, will probably file income-tax returns this year. These returns begin to trickle in around January 1. Every return for the calendar year 1941 must be in by midnight of March 16. In order to handle the enormous volume of work alone entailed of receiving these returns, the Bureau of Internal Revenue has greatly increased its staff in its several district offices. The experience of former years shows that the Bureau is always swamped with late returns. If taxpayers will file their returns early, they will find that this will be mutually beneficial to them and to the Government.

A large number of these returns contain errors which, if not corrected by the audit, would result to the disadvantage of the taxpayer. Many persons pay in more than the amount of the tax due; others fail to take advantage of the personal exemption, the credit allowed for dependents, or deductions from gross income to which they are entitled.

In making out your income-tax return, read carefully and study the instructions that accompany the forms on which the tax is computed. If you need more information, it may be obtained at the office of the collector of internal revenue, deputy collector, or an internal-revenue agent in charge. When you visit an internal-revenue office to get assistance in making out your return, take a copy of your 1940 return with you.
